sent in the Corporation Law. The provisions on mergers under the old law referred only to railway corporations and to public service corp-orations. Unlike the new law, it outlined no procedures.

For mergers and consolidation to be effected under the old law, corporations have to go through the circuitous provisions of Sections 28-1/2, 17-1/2 and 18 and follow the procedure set by the Supreme Court in the case of Reyes V Blouse, GR L-4420, May 19, 1952

Biolse, Cr. L-4-20, May 15, 1552. While the words "merger" and "consolidation" are used inter-changeably, they are not one and the same. In a merger, a corpora-tion is extinguished and absorbed by the other that remains in exist-me. In a consolidation both the ence. In a consolidation, both the original corporations cease to exist and a new one is created.

both cases, the parties are d "constituent corporations." In called Under the new law, corporations have the express powers to merge and consolidate. An entire new title covering five sections is devoted to the subject.

In brief, the procedure to be followed in merging of corporations is as follows: The board of directors of each corporation which decide to merge or consolidate formulates and approves a plan of merger or consolidation. The plan contains all possible information relevant to the proposal. The plan is then submitted for approval to the stockholders of the constituent corporations at separate meetings. The vote of stockholders owning at least 2/3 of the outstand ing capital stock is necessary for the approval of the plan in the case of a stock corporation, and 2/8 of the members in the case of a non-stock corporation. The plan may be amended by the board of directors but must be ratified by the stock-holders or members by the same vote requirement. Once the plan is approved, art-icles of merger or consolidation are executed by each of the constituent corporations, containing statement of the plan, the number of shares outstanding (or the members if non-stock) of each constituent corporation, and the number of corporation, and the number of votes for or against the plan. The articles are then submitted to the SEC for approval. If it ap-proves, the SEC issues a certificate of merger or consolidation. In case the SEC believes that the proposed merger or consolidation is contravy. merger or consolidation is contrary to existing laws, it schedules a hear-ing for the constituent corporations to present their side Effects of valid merger or consolidation are provided for in Sec-tion 80 of the Corporation Code which states:

1) "The constituent corportions become one single corpora-tion, which shall be the corporation designated in the plan of merger or consolidation;

2) "The separate existence of the the corporations that merged or consolidated cases, except that of the surviving or consolidated corp-oration which shall possess all the rights, privileges, immunities and powers, and shall be subject to all the duties and liabilities of a corr ration organized under this code

 "The surviving or con-solidated corporation shall possess all the rights, privileges, immunities and franchises of each constituent corporation and all properties, real or personal and all debts, including subscriptions to shares and othe choices of action and all other in in terests of or belonging to or due to each constituent corporation shall be taken or transferred to and vested in such surviving or consolid-ated corporation, without further act or deed.

 4) "The surviving or consolid-ated corporation shall be liable for all the obligations of each cons-tituent corporation, as if such surviving or consolidated corporation had itself incurred such obligations. Any action pending, by or against any of the constituent corporations may be prosecuted by or against the surviving or consolidated corp-oration. No rights of credits nor any lien shall be impaired by such merger or consolidation.

UNITED NATIONS, New York, Aug. 28 (AFP) - The special session of the UN General Assembly will today tackle in earnest the tricky task of reconciling the views of rich and poor countries on how to conduct their dialogue on the future of the

on the luture of the world economy. African and Asian de-legates stressed last night that speeches by minis-ters of leading western countries since the open-ing of the session last Monday left little doubt that there is still a wide gap between the posi-tions of the two sides.

"The industrial coun-tries are only prepared to negotiate when they are under pressure," a Third World official said, in aleasing of the world oil market situation.

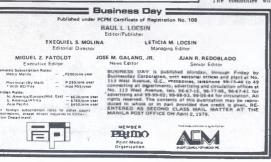

However, foreign min-isters of the European Economic Community at a formal EEC Council session on Wednesday "confirmed the Commu-tive resolute to new an nity's resolve to play an active part" in the talks, an EEC handout said. It said the ministers "reiterated their political will to do their utmost to ensure that the negotia ensure that the negotia-tions reach a successful conclusion that will con-tribute to the revival of the world economy and the restructuring of interlations on a more just and equitable basis."
