FORMAL NOTE ON SURRENDER DUE

STATE COUNCIL IS REVIVED BY PRES. OSMEÑA

Petaín's Fate To Be Decided Soon,
Trial Nears End

With President Sergio Osmeña pleading anew for unity, Congress was convened in another 30-day special session at 5:00 o'clock yesterday after noon. Attributing the triumph of the Allies to their being "united", the chief executive again pleaded to all elements to join hands "for the best interests of the nation."

The president argued that national unity is "absolutely essential" especially in view of the fact that the country confronts

Funeral Rites Held For California Solon

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14. (UP)—Funeral rites for Senator Hiram Johnson were held in San Francisco's City Hall yesterday afternoon. More than 2,500 attended.

Senator Sheridan Downey delivered the eulogy.

A military guard of honor and an army band formed the honorary escort when the funeral cortege arrived in San Francisco.

All Senators To Draw Lots

All preparations for the drawing of lots which will determine the tenure of office of the individual members of the Senate are now complete, it was authoritatively learned yesterday. The draw is scheduled to be held within ten days from today, in accordance with the bill approved by Congress during the last session.

It was reliably learned that a drum has been especially con-

Roxas Denies Charge, Says He Will Fight Fascism Here

In a strongly worded reply to an article published yesterday in the Manila Guardian, a local publication, charging him with being a tool of Fascists, Senate President Manuel Roxas not only denied the allegations but challenged every statement made in the article. The senate president declared that he is not openly against Fascism but will fight it in the country.

Senate President Roxas' letter to the editor of said paper follows: "My attention has been called to your headline in today's issue of the Manila Guardian and I feel constrained to state that this article merely reflects a malicious and unjust attempt to smear my reputation and public conduct. There is not one particle of truth to the con-

Radiocast Says Japs Accept Terms

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13. (UP) Domei, the official Japanese news agency, reported tonight that Japan had accepted the Allied surrender demand and that an imperial message of acceptance would soon be forthcoming.

The Domei report, broadcast by Radio Tokyo at about 11 p.m. (about 3 p.m., Manila time, Tuesday) did not give details of the forthcoming message, merely stating that "an imperial message accepting the Potsdam proclamation is forthcoming soon."

Japanese Deliberate On Terms

The question which had delayed the Japanese reply—the demand of the Allies that the emperor be under the authority of the Allied supreme commander as soon as Japan surrenders—was not referred to in the Domei report. The report was rebroadcast at least once by Radio Tokyo.

"Immediately upon receipt of the Allied reply yesterday, Monday," Domei said, "the Japanese government started deliberations upon its terms, which created a very serious problem for the Japanese people. The cabinet had been in continuous session until late Monday night. It is understood the Japanese government's reply probably will be available any time as soon as the legal procedure is completed."

Broadcast Follows Raid

Observers noted that the Domei broadcast reporting acceptance of the Potsdam proclamation came in the wake of another heavy Superfortress attack on Honshu. (In Guam, headquarters of Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the U. S. Strategic Air Forces in the Pacific, the assault was described as the first phase of a new 10-week campaign to reduce Japanese industries to ashes.)

Three fleets of B-29's, in the first such attack since the war broke out, hit railroad marshalling yards at Marifu, on Honshu, on Tuesday, Japan time, encountering no opposition, according to official announcements from Guam. (Marifu is not far from Hiroshima, victim of the first atomic bomb.)

Malacañan intervened in the NDC textile sale was revealed during yesterday's hearing in connection with the probe when among the documents presented included a letter addressed by the assistant secretary to the president to Secretary Vicente Singson Encarnacion, acting manager of the firm, interceding for the wife of former Solicitor-General Alex Reyes.

EditorialThe Special Session

The Philippine Congress which was elected under the block-voting system in the popular elections of 1941 again meets in a special session. In its first session it was natural that organizational matters consumed most of its time. The important question of leadership having been settled, its energies may now be directed to constructive work.

We wish its success, nay, we pray for it on behalf of the war-scarred masses who still continue to be overwhelmed by the primeval problem of food, clothing and shelter. The principle that governments exist for the welfare of the citizens instead of the citizens existing for the benefit of the governments is one of the fundamental differences between facism and democracy.

The action of the National Development Company in having subordinated the interests of the citizenry to its own is, in our belief, a departure from the governmental ideology for which we fought for.

It would be presumption on our part to make suggestions to that august body composed, as it is, of the nation's leading citizens. But we insist that as the saying goes, "He who does not look from where he comes, will not reach his destination." All governments came from the people, established by the express or tacit consent of the people. And its various instrumentalities stand on the higher category—a creation and a servant of the people.

"Deutschland Uber Alles" And Other Nazi Martial Airs Banned In U.S. Zone

By ROBERT MUSEL

United Press War Correspondent

WIESBADEN, GERMANY, Aug. 13—(UP)—Dozens of songs that set Nazi feet marching off to war have been banned in the United States zone of occupation.

The program to purge German culture of Nazi influences is designed by experts in the hope that, for example, when future generations hear a certain melody by Haydn, they would not associate it with the inflammatory patriotic hymn of their fathers, "Deutschland Uber Alles."

In Baroque Palace near this notorious Nazi city, a score of American experts have been closely examining German films, radio, and classical and popular music to excise from it with surgical impartiality all spots of Fascist infection. "Horst Wessel Song," "We Sail Against England," "My Life Belongs to Germany," and other such songs indelibly associated with wars of aggressions already are forbidden and more are being added daily.

"But," one expert said, "we are not book burners. We removed only the words of 'Deutschland Uber Alles'—the famous old melody remains. Ours is a delicate job and we take all possible pains to see that we destroy only Nazi culture—not German culture."

Headed by Lieut.-Col. John Stanley, these experts are now awaiting word from intelligence agents on wartime activities of many great German artists, such as film star Emil Jannings and conductor Wilhelm Furtwaengler, before moving into the personnel of the German entertainment world.

It was learned, however, that the noted pianist Walter Gieseking may be banned because at a recent concert for American officers, he resolutely refused to play a piece by Tschai-kowsky, who is Russian.

"He could have played the music requested with his feet," said Capt. Robert LaBranche, former screen and radio writer. "His arrogance was such that we refused him permission to play at a subsequent affair."

Arnold Kvam, former teacher of music at the University of Wisconsin and Rolling College of Florida, who is a technical adviser on music, said that the Nazis perverted many classics to propaganda ends, such as having a Nazi flag waving on the stage during the triumphal march in Verdi's "Aida" and so accenting Wagner's "Ring" operas that every succeeding performance made Siegfried seem more like Hitler and the dragon more like the Western Allies.

"We are not banning Wagner," Wagner was not particularly discouraging it either," Kvam said.

"However, it is not generally known outside Germany that agner was not particularly popular in the Reich. For instance, the Munich Opera had an eleven-month season. During 10 of these months, Wagner rarely was performed. But during the

This And That

If one should stroll down the streets of Manila nowadays especially during pleasant evenings, he will certainly feel elated if he is a pleasure-seeker and has a lot of money to spend. The air buzzes with the hum of a crowd of soldiers and civilians streaming along the sidewalks in search of fun. The artistically arranged display of souvenirs and gifts in the well-decorated and brightly lighted shops lure the passers-by drop in for a look. Gay music of latest Western tunes float above the gay multitude and mingle with the roar of motor vehicle up and down the streets.

Except for the inevitable sight of rubble still undisposed of an little shocks built on half-broken foundations that alone remain of once grand edifices, one would hardly believe a blight once passed through this city. Were it not for the presence of such conspicuous military personnel so suggestive of an all out military efforts, one would never know a great war about to reach a climax still goes on not far away, judging from the mood of the place. A passing glance may draw out a hasty conclusion that all is well.

But if one were to peer among the shadows of lonely pillars jutting out among the low temporary structures, the soft pleading mumble of many beggars would reach his ears. If one were to watch the number of children loitering about uneasily in the daytime, anyone would know that this happens so because of the equally large number of rooms and buildings closed in the day since these are open only for business at night.

Indeed, so outrageous are the number of nightclubs, dance-halls, and similar such establishments, and so, oh so pitifully few are the educational, social, and cultural facilities of the city. One would think the city has decidedly come out openly for pleasure and forgotten everything else in the merry-making.

However, it has not, really. It is merely enjoying itself for a change while waiting for the Youth to take a full deep breath and start over again.

WIN'S COLUMNON PROMISES

He was a "smart" law student promenading on the Dewey Boulevard with a lady fair. It was the usual Sunday afternoon when the sparkling gaiety of exotic Manila was on a stroll. As the shadows deepened and the promenading was abandoned for the seats on the rocks, the young U.P. law student and the demure "colegiala" sat close to each other, trying to capture the sweetest fulfillment of the last few minutes before the "sweet sorrow" of parting by talking about the endless topic of love. The young man soon quoted from Francois Villon: "Oh! If I were king...what treasures will not I lay at thy feet...the world shall be a ruby in your finger ring...The stars and the moon..." The young girl however had that good quality of housewives, sanity, and she replied: "Hearts, promises and laws are made only to be broken."

Breach of promise is actionable under any law. Under our law you recover only actual damages, while under the Anglo-American law the so-called heart-balm is allowed.

When General MacArthur promised to return, he did return. When the Philippine government promised recognition to guerrillas, it intends to do just that because although the young "colegiala" thinks that promises are made only to be broken still our government believes in the saying that "a promise is a debt that you must not forget." However, it is excusable if you have by fate's decree fallen under the spell of the "flower of forgetfulness".

Peace May Bring Repercussion In Some U. S. Business Fronts

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13. (UP)—Business quarters today indicated that peace will bring repercussion in several basic commodities since producers of these goods have been relying on wartime conditions to keep prices up.

These commodities include wool, of which there are three billion pounds stored in the southern hemisphere and held up on account of shipping shortage.

Business circles opined that if the British, who control most of this wool, try to dispose this commodity quickly, a collapse in prices would be inevitable.

It was also speculated that wheat is likely to become a surplus especially in the United States where large quantities have been in production for industrial alcohol and livestock feed.

Reduction in armaments and livestock requirements would result in lessened demand for wheat.

Although there is great demand for cotton goods, there is strong possibility that cotton would become surplus commodity on the international market within a short period after cessation of hostilities.

The end of hostilities would ease the sugar and fats shortages by the summer of 1946, experts said.

They added that Europe should be producing at a normal pace by next summer, but it will take several years before hog production can be restored to pre-war levels on the continent.

An even longer period will be required for the dairy and beef cattle industry to reach normal levels, experts added.

Reunion

The Fifth M. P. Battalion (Philippine Scouts) held a dance in the outfits camp site Sunday starting at 2:00 p.m. and ending at 9:00 in the evening. Visitors were former residents of the pre-war U. S. Army camps who were afforded the opportunity to meet old acquaintances again. American and Filipino soldiers of other regiments as well as many civilians were also invited to the affair.

Sino Red General Orders Offensive

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13. (UP)—Radio Yanan today reported that General Chu Teh, commander-in-chief of Chinese communist forces, have ordered his troops to launch widespread attacks on Japanese armies and their lines of communications in China proper and Manchuria.

An earlier Yanan broadcast said that the Korean Independence League has called on Koreans in the Japanese Army and Korean civilians to surrender immediately to Chinese Communists.

Chiang's Order To Sino Reds

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14. (UP)—Radio Yanan, in a broadcast intercepted here today, denounced General Chiang Kai-shek's order instructing Chinese communist forces to take no independent action against Japanese and puppet troops after the Japanese surrender.

The order, Radio Yanan declared, is contrary to the Potsdam Declaration. Gen. Chiang, it added, had issued the order because he was preparing for a civil war.

The broadcast claims that Chinese communist armies should participate in receiving the Japanese surrender.

U.S. WAR AGAINST JAPAN REVIEWED

BY UNITED PRESS

Diplomatic relations between the United States and Japan fell apart during 1941, and one crisis followed another. By mid-November war appeared inevitable and Saburu Kurusu, special Japanese "peace envoy", arrived in San Francisco en route to Washington, ostensibly to patch up the deep-rooted differences between the two countries.

"I hope to break through the line and make a touchdown," Kurusu told reporters.

On Dec. 7, 1941, Kurusu and Japanese Ambassador Adm. Kichisaburo Nomura called on Secretary of State Cordell Hull to discuss an exchange of diplomatic notes between the two countries. The visit started at 2:20 p.m. Sunday, and before it was over, Japanese bombs had fallen on Pearl Harbor, crippling the Pacific Fleet and thrusting America into the war. On the same day—Dec. 8 west of the International Date Line bombs fell on the Philippines, Guam, Wake Island, Singapore and Hongkong, and Japanese forces invaded Thailand and Malaya.

FDR Sends Note

President Roosevelt, vacationing at Warm Springs, had hurried to Washington on Dec. 2 upon receiving an urgent telephone call from Hull, and just before the Japanese attack, Mr. Roosevelt sent a personal message to Japanese Emperor Hirohito asking that war be averted.

The blow at Pearl Harbor was a heavy one. Ten warships were put out of action, five of them battleships. Casualties were 2,343 Army and Navy personnel killed, 1,272 wounded and 962 missing. Most of the Army and Navy planes there—and the Philippines—were wrecked.

On Dec. 9, Japanese troops landed on the north and west coast of Luzon after widespread air attacks. The same day the Japanese bombed Singapore and tried to enter Hongkong but were driven out. Thailand ceased resistance immediately, and the international settlement at Shanghai fell to the Japanese.

Kimmel Replaced

The Japanese moved fast in the early days of the war, and on Dec. 10 the British suffered one of their greatest naval losses. The 35,000-ton Prince of Wales and the 32,000-ton Repulse were sunk by torpedo planes as they steamed north to ease the threat on Singapore by breaking up a landing on the Malay Peninsula.

On Dec. 17, Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, commander at Pearl Harbor when the enemy blow was replaced by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz. The Army commander, Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, was replaced by Lt. Gen. Delos C. Emmons. On Dec. 20, Adm. Ernest J. King was named head of the Navy.

Meantime the Japanese opened a general offensive against Hongkong, landed troops on Davao, threw thousands of reinforcements into Luzon, concentrated in Indo-China for an invasion of Burma, and on Dec. 17 landed troops on Borneo at the oil centers of Miri and Lubang.

The Japanese Domei Agency disclosed then that as early as Jan. 24, 1941, Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, commander of the Japanese combined fleets, had written: "I am looking forward by dictating peace to the United States in the White House at Washington."

Japs Bomb Manila

On Dec. 24, Wake Island was reported lost after 389 defending Marines and seven Navy medical corps men held out for 14 days against superior forces. They were overwhelmed after sinking seven Japanese warships including a cruiser.

The Japanese bombed Manila, causing heavy loss of life among civilians, bombed Corregidor Fortress and demanded that America surrender. At that time Nimitz took over the crippled Pacific Fleet. Hongkong surrendered on Christmas Eve, Singapore was placed under Martial law, and the Japanese shelled the Celebes and seized the Gilbert Islands.

On Jan. 31, 1942, Sir Archibald P. Wavell was named Supreme Commander in the Southwest Pacific and he sent up headquarters at Java. Adm. Thomas C. Hart was commander of the almost non-existent Allied fleet. The Japanese by then were burning open towns and shooting civilians.

On Jan. 3, the Japanese bombed Rabaul, New Britain.

MacArthur Carries On

By Mid-January the enemy tide of conquest had swept up eight of the nine Malay States. The Japanese bombed Tarakan, oil-rich island off Borneo, and captured it almost immediately. Japanese and Thai soldiers invaded Burma, and others were within 90 miles of Singapore.

On Luzon, Gen. Douglas MacArthur was carrying out his skillful defense of the island against overwhelming superiority. By Jan. 21, his forces had retreated to Bataan. America sent 600,000 troops and many planes to the Pacific, but could not send them to the Philippines.

Australian Imperials were fighting a bitter battle on New Britain, and Lee, capital of Australian New Guinea, was evacuated. The Australians appealed to America for aid.

The situation became darker as the Japanese overran the Celebes and all of Borneo, swept on toward Singapore and demanded that MacArthur surrender. On Jan. 31 the British withdrew to Singapore Island, losing the Battle of Malaya after 54 days of jungle fighting which was to characterize later Pacific warfare.

Halsey Strikes

Waves of bombers hit Singapore during that time; Soerabaya, Java, was bombed and parachutists dropped on Sumatra. American B-17 Flying Forts—the old type without a tail gunner—bombed Malaya.

Every victory had been Japan's until Feb. 1. Nimitz announced then that a task force under Vice Admiral William F. Halsey had hit six Japanese naval and air bases in the Marshall and Gilbert Islands. Sixteen Japanese ships were sunk.

Dutch forces suffered losses in the bombardment of Soerabaya, and American fighting planes joined for the first time in the defense of Java. Thousands of miles away there were fierce air battles over Rangoon with Claire Chennault's Flying Tigers in action. On February 8, the Japanese crossed the state landing to Singapore, capturing the fortress a week later.

Rangoon Falls

On Feb. 15 the Japanese invaded Sumatra and Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo warned that Burma, China, India, the East Indies, Australia and New Zealand were next, in that order. The American and Dutch naval forces before Java were virtually wiped out. The Japanese bombed Darwin, Australia, for the first time.

Rangoon fell and the Japanese attacked Ceylon. The Japanese Battle Fleet moved into the Bay of Bengal, and Ceylon, India were threatened anew. The repulse of the enemy fleet on Easter Sunday, 1942, marked the end of expansion by sea.

Bataan was captured on April 9. On May 6, Corregidor surrendered and the survivors were led on the death march through Manila. MacArthur had reached Australia on March 17.

Bitter resistance on New Guinea slowed the Japanese for the first time and the enemy's defeat at Milne Bay and the subsequent battles of Buna and Gona marked the start of the road back. An invasion force was defeated in the Coral Sea on May 9—first major naval victory for the U. S. Navy—and American production might, began to tell.

On May 10 a handful of B-25 Mitchell bombers under Lt. Col. James F. Doolittle dropped a handful of bombs on Tokyo, Yokohama, Nagoya and Kobe. In June the Japanese Navy was decisively defeated at Midway in a greater victory than that of the Coral Sea.

On June 3 the Japanese bombed Dutch Harbor, Alaska, and on June 12 landed in the Aleutians.

On August 10, Admiral King announced that American forces had landed on Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands, invaded by the Japanese earlier in the year. Months of bitter fighting on land and on sea followed before the Japanese were cleared from the area.

Offensives

By Dec. 14—when the Japanese were finally thrown out of Buna—the enemy had overrun all of Burma, Thailand, Indo-China, Malaya, Java, Borneo, the Philippines, the Celebes, numerous other islands and were firmly entrenched on New Guinea. Japanese submarines were operating as far east as the American Pacific Coast and as far west as Madagascar. China was completely isolated.

In 1943 the Allies began a vast pincers movement which was to press the Japanese further and further back. New offensives were forming in India and Burma.

American forces began the task of clearing the Aleutians, and the Army and Navy occupied Amchitka and Adak, constructed airfields and bombed Kiska and Attu. In May, the Army landed on Attu and wiped out the enemy in three weeks. A subsequent landing on Kiska found that the enemy had fled.

While American ships were outslugging the Japanese Navy in the Solomons, submarines were busy and by mid-summer had sunk one-third of all Japanese shipping.

MacArthur's troops cleared Huon Peninsula on New Guinea, feinted toward Truk and landed on New Britain. In March MacArthur invaded Dutch New Guinea, taking Hollandia and cutting off 150,000 Japanese. During the summer, remaining forces were mopped up and preparations made to enter the Philippines from Morotai. Nimitz captured Palau, supplying a base for the Philippine attack.

Sainan Landina

On Nov. 20 American forces invaded the Gilbert Islands, and U. S. Marines and Army forces landed on Makin and Tarawa Atolls. Seizure of the Gilbert Islands gave needed ground facilities and long range bombers went to work. On Jan. 31 the Marshall were invaded. Then came Kwajalein and Eniwetok.

On June 14 American troops landed on Saipan Island in the Marianas, 1,496 miles from Tokyo. The Japanese fleet sped to the rescue, only to be routed in an action which cost the enemy 140 planes and 14 ships sunk. Guam was next on the invasion schedule.

MacArthur in Leyte

Meanwhile in the China-Burma-India theater military operations were stalemated. Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten arrived to take command of forces in southeast Asia. Lt. Gen. Joseph V. Stilwell began a drive from Assam sought through Burma to reopen a land route to China. The British began sending warships to the Indian Ocean.

The return to the Philippines began in September, 1944, when Halsey destroyed a convoy rushing reserves to Mindanao. B-29's attacked Formosa and carrier planes raked the Philippines. MacArthur landed on Leyte Oct. 20, and the Japanese fleet came out of hiding in an effort to wipe out the invasion forces.

In the naval battles which followed the American fleet sank or heavily damaged 58 Japanese warships. U. S. losses were extremely light.

China Threatened

Meanwhile the Japanese invaded India in March, were repulsed at Kohima and Imphal, and the British began slowly driving them back toward Rangoon. On June 5 American B-29's began operations from China and on June 15 hit Japan for the first time. The first B-29 raid on Tokyo was made on Nov. 24 by planes operating from the Marianas.

In March, Japan launched an attack designed to split China in two and force the country out of the war. By late fall Chungking was threatened and the Japanese had driven a wedge through central China, linking Singapore and Shanghai. Then the tide turned in that theater.

By the end of 1944 the British had fleets in the Indian Ocean and in the Pacific, working with the American Navy.

The year 1945 really marked the beginning of the end for Japan.

MacArthur in City

Early in January Nimitz and MacArthur conferred as B-29's hit Japan and as Navy planes raided Formosa and the Manila area. On Jan. 10 MacArthur invaded Luzon, and late in the month warships began pounding Iwo Jima, 750 miles from Japan.

The Stilwell road from Burma to China was completed and China had a new route of supplies.

MacArthur entered Manila in Feb. 5, but fighting continued there for a month. In the same month, carrier planes raided Tokyo for the first time. MacArthur returned to Corregidor and on Feb. 19 Marines stormed ashore at Iwo to begin a bloody battle which did not end until March 17.

The war looks better in Asia, too. On March 8, Chinese troops seized Lashio, terminus of the old Burma Road, and on March 9, British forces entered Mandalay.

The American Navy worked over Japan again, and on March 20 found the remnants of the Japanese fleet in hiding and destroyed 475 planes and sank or damaged 30 ships. From there the Navy went to Ryukus and began concentrated bombing. The same month Japan had a series of cabinet crisis.

FDR Dies

On Easter Sunday, April 1, American 10th Army troops—soldiers and Marines—landed on Okinawa and a vast ring was tightened about Japan. The death of President Roosevelt came on April 12 even as victory was finally in sight.

In May MacArthur invaded Borneo and Mountbatten announced that the Burma campaign was at an end. These two developments came as Germany formally surrendered and the full might of the Allies was freed for the Pacific.

By then the Japanese had begun their suicide attacks on American shipping and the fleet suffered losses. The Japanese

MOVE TO SEAT 2 MINORITY MEN IN SENATE STARTED

Sotto, Alejandrino Boosted For Posts

A move to seat two runners-up in the last national elections in the Senate was started by the Popular Democratic Party immediately after its organization, authoritative circles revealed yesterday.

Opposition leaders point out that two vacancies exist in the upper chamber of Congress on account of the death of the incumbents, Senators-elect Daniel Maramba and Jose Ozamis. In case the results of the last poll have not yet been canvassed and the elected officials proclaimed, the senate list may now be revised to include those who placed twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth in the senatorial race, it was explained.

It was gathered that the unofficial reports gathered by the opposition headquarters show that Vicente Sotto gathered the highest votes among the runners-up and Jose Alejandrino, second. Third in the list is former Cebu senator Filemon Sotto, it was learned.

Entire P.I. Freed

In June the Chinese recaptured Foochow and began regaining former American 14th air force bases and on June 22 the bitter Okinawa campaign ended with 11,260 Americans killed and 33,769 wounded—the heaviest casualties of any campaign in the Pacific. The Japanese lost 90,401 killed.

MacArthur announced in July that the entire Philippines had been liberated and that the campaign was almost closed—freeing his men for the task ahead.

The Navy returned to Japan and for the first time bombed the mainland. Navy planes worked over Japanese industry and the Japanese did not strike back.

Then on July 26, the United States, China and Great Britain addressed the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan, asking her to surrender or to face utter destruction. Japan chose to ignore the ultimatum.

On the fateful Monday, Aug. 6, the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, practically wiping out that Honshu city in one single blow. Three days later, on Aug. 9, Russia entered the Pacific war and started a giant powerful pincer movement against Manchuria.

The second atomic bomb of the war wrecked the biggest Kyushu city of Nagasaki on Aug. 10. The same evening, Radio Tokyo broadcast Japan's surrender offer, asking, however, that the emperor be kept on the throne. The Allied replied to the Japanese note Saturday night, accepting the Japanese surrender on the condition that the authority of the emperor "shall be subject to the Supreme Commander" of the Allied forces.

In view of the increasing number of the members of the Manila Night Clubs' Federation, and their desire to help one another for their mutual benefits, a Special Meeting will be held today, August 15, 1945, at 9:30 A. Among important matters to be taken up will be the election of four additional members of the Board of Directors, and other important problems affecting the operation of Night Clubs.

"I have been a consistent enemy of the vested interests in our country. "I have no political or business connections with Mr. Andres Soriano, much less do I have any business or political connections with any Jew. Your statement that Mr. Hemady, who by the way is not a Jew, has bought the P. Vera and Sons Press to be placed at my disposal is a brazen lie. Mr. Hemady has nothing to do with the printing press or with the Manila Daily News.

"I desire to avail myself of this opportunity to state once and for all that I am not in sympathy with any Fascist group, that I am going to fight any move to introduce Fascism in the Philippines, that I am going to prevent foreigners from taking any part in politics in the Philippines and that I shall do everything within my power to forestall the control of our government by vested interests.

"I request that this letter, be printed in your paper and given the prominence that you have accorded to the unsigned attack against me."

"Your truly,
 "(Sgd.) MANUEL ROXAS"

 Mornet has already rested his case and demanded capital punishment for the hero of Verdun.

The defense launched the final struggle to save Petaín's life yesterday at the 19th session of the hearing. Chief defense lawyer Fernand Payen started the legal battle by describing the political situation in France during the period leading up to the armistice.

He will be followed by others who will try to explain charges that Petaín plotted against the republic. The remainder of the defense summing up will be handled by Iro Isorri.

The hearing yesterday was adjourned at 5:45 p.m. ed with the immense task of reconstruction and rehabilitation, complicated by problems attendant with independence.

The recreation of the council of state, which will permit the heads of both chambers of Congress to participate in the formulation of national policies, was also announced by the chief executive in his address before the law-making body.

The president devoted the first part of his speech in informing the legislature of the status of the war situation, beginning with the Potsdam declaration to the eventual downfall of the "arrogant" Japanese nation.

The letter, which was endorsed favorably by the NDC head to Vicente Villamin, presently suspended sales manager of the firm, stated that Mrs. Engracia de Reyes "is intending to open a retail store in Navotas, Rizal" and as such would like to purchase textiles from the National Development Company.

As shown to the investigating committee yesterday, the document contained a footnote in the Secretary Singson Encarnacion's handwriting authorizing Mrs. Reyes to purchase "up to the amount of P2,000.00

Sales steadfastly maintained in his testimony that he alone prepared the minutes and that no change thereon had been effected. He said that his usual practice with respect to the preparation of minutes was to distribute to the directors copies of the corrected draft, which he transcribes after every meeting, on the day of the following meeting.
