LISTEN AND LEARN

Dialogue is only possible when one is listening carefully to another without interrupting him, without thinking ahead about what one will reply when he pauses but concentrating on what he is saying when he is saying it. Dialogue occurs when the listener is truly attentive and not pretending to be God or an archangel. Then, when a pause does occur, he is ready to answer with a full understanding of the other's point of view. — By Dorothy Goldberg in The Creative Woman
