

Marcos Ready to Grant Individual Pardon to Huks

President Marcos has indicated that he was ready to grant pardons to Huks on an "individual meritorious cases, but not in favor of granting general amnesty as proposed by some sectors."

The president spoke during his regular "Pakinggan Ang Pangulo" radio-tv weekly series, interviewed by a panel of Manila newspapermen and editors on the peace and order situation and the progress of the administration's Central Luzon development program.

Earlier, he drew a bi-partisan support for his bold program to suspend military operations and entrust in the hands of local executives the task of maintaining peace and order drive in Central Luzon.

Impose Control or Die

by JUAN G. FRIVALDO

It is about time President Marcos and the Monetary Board impose control or face the danger of revolution. Our country is going to the economic doghouse unless we start immediately protecting our own people and our own economy.

Foreign manufactured goods that could easily be manufactured in our country are flooding the Philippines. Machines that could build our small factories are never acquired. That is why we continue buying packaging plants that hardly increase our production.

As a result we are languishing into a perennially agricultural country, the proverbial hewers of wood. Our trade balance is continually growing against us. Our overall national progress dips to 2.4% while our population growth soars to 3.2%. Our per capita income is lower than Japan, Taiwan, Malaysia and Thailand. That is why the poor in our country is getting poorer, our rich growing richer.

That is why the prices of commodities are rising faster here than in other countries while our labor wages remain stationary. That is why many of our people go to bed without dinner. That is why our squatters are mushrooming, seven million of our people are jobless, five million children out of schools.

This trend cannot continue for long. A poverty stricken people may lose their patience someday and rise. Even affluent France, Germany and Bahamas are swirling in demonstrations. How much more the poor Asiatic buffeted by uncontrolled population growth.

Students in many countries are restless. Philippine youth are not that stupid not to realize what is happening in other countries, nor not to know the misery of the Filipino people.

The tragedy is that this economic plunge to trouble could be easily arrested, if we only would try.

The Central Bank, the Monetary Board and Malacanang has all the powers to institute economic reforms without need for additional legislations.

For instance, the Central Bank can announce that in two years no more than 50% of the usual dollars would be allowed to buy spare parts. You can bet your soul that Filipino and foreign capital will race to put up factories to supply us with spark plugs, generators, axles, etc.

Today look at the stupid spectacle of 35 vehicle assembly plants in Manila area. Yes, a small country like ours has 35 assembly plants.

Here is another example. Malacanang and Central Bank can announce that beginning 1969 only 80% of the usual dollars would be allowed to buy powdered milk; in 1970 another cut of 20% is applied till we gradually eliminate milk imports. Just you watch big dairy plants come up in our country. Watch our people pamper their cows like babies.

But look at our stupidity today. We throw P450 million to subsidize tobaccos which is a vice and notdas centavo to milk.

Spare parts and milk are just simple examples of how we can protect a young industry and encourage new ones.

Here is another example. Baby hand agricultural tillers are here to stay. It will eventually replace carabao in our fields. Yet what do we do? We just sit smug and importing all our hand tillers from Japan when all the small tractors we need could easily be manufactured in our country. India and Taiwan are now manufacturing their own hand tractors.

Everybody knows that the Philippines attained unprecedented industrial progress during the import control days. Factories sprung up, production increased. Since full decontrol was instituted, our economy gradually went down. Marcos made it worse.

America, Japan, England, Israel applied their own control. Even Australia impose milk tariffs on New Zealand, her former daughter. Even the common market is nothing but a tall tariff wall. But the Philippines lives on the hollow pride of free enterprise on an empty stomach.

Let me repeat, our economic train is running headlong into a crash. That is why the government is forced to resort to police state, to use the PC to repress discontent, to strike fear into our people to appease their economic difficulties.

It is about time President Marcos wakes up to the exploding crises. Not so much for himself and our generation but for heaven's sake, for our children and those yet unborn.

PFM Creates Trust Fund for Private Education

President Marcos last week created a trust fund, roughly amounting to P24 million, for assistance to private education.

The creation of this special fund, to be drawn from the 28 million dollar Special Fund for war damage, was embodied in the agreement forged earlier, between the Philippines and the United States on June 11, 1968, and authorized by the United States Public Law 88-94.

Under this law, a special fund of about P24 million will be set aside to be known as "Fund for Assistance to Private Education."

The fund created for this purpose will be administered by the Private Education Assistance Committee, composed of secretary of education as chairman and with representatives from the National Economic Council, the Catholic Education, of the Philippines, the Association of Christian Schools and Colleges, and the Philippine Association of Colleges and Universities as members.

To insure the enduring character of the trust fund, the amount shall be maintained intact but may be augmented by donations and other lawful transfers by the Philippine government in a manner consistent with its character as perpetual trust.

The fund will be used to finance programs of assistance to private education utilizing only the earnings through grants or loans for faculty training and development in scholarships, research grants, faculty incentives, inter-schools cooperative projects and other beneficial programs.
